Drugs Tied to Slayings

Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12 — Investigators in the slaying of Sharon Tate and four other persons have found narcotics at the scene of the killings, reliable sources said today.

The Los Angeles police meantime refused to discuss their investigation except to say that 19 men had been assigned to it.

Other sources said that "a quantity" of marijuana and some pills that appeared to be methedrine were found in a 1966 black Porsche sports car found parked just outside the gate to the estate where five persons were murdered Friday night.
